

Global Health
LECTURE SERIES 2014-2015
FROM ACTIVISM TO ACTION

Promises & Limitations of Gender-Transformative Health Programming with Men:

Critical Reflections from the Field

Tuesday, March 31, 2015 | 12:00 p.m. - 1:00 p.m.

A lecture with
Shari L. Dworkin, Ph.D., M.S.

Professor, Associate Dean of Academic Affairs,
UC San Francisco School of Nursing;
Affiliated Faculty, Center for AIDS Prevention Studies;
Affiliated Faculty, Global Health Sciences M.S. Program

— Lunch Provided —

Global Health
LECTURE SERIES 2014-2015
FROM ACTIVISM TO ACTION

Promises & Limitations of Gender-Transformative Health Programming with Men: Critical Reflections from the Field

A lecture with

Shari L. Dworkin, Ph.D., M.S.

Professor, Associate Dean of Academic Affairs,
UC San Francisco School of Nursing;
Affiliated Faculty, Center for AIDS Prevention Studies;
Affiliated Faculty, Global Health Sciences M.S. Program

Tuesday, March 31, 2015

12:00 p.m. to 1:00 p.m.

The Forum at Ronald Tutor Campus Center, Room 450
University Park Campus
University of Southern California

— Lunch Provided —

Since the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development in Cairo, researchers and practitioners have been trying to shift health programming with men from gender-neutral to more gender-sensitive—and transformative. In this lecture UC San Francisco Professor Dr. Shari Dworkin will assess how social science has contributed to gender-transformative global health interventions with men. She will assess the empirical evidence, examine challenges and limitations and make recommendations for future work in this thriving interdisciplinary area of study. This talk is co-hosted by the USC Institute for Global Health, USC Program on Global Health & Human Rights, USC Dornsife Gender Studies Program and USC Dornsife Center for Feminist Research.

RSVP

globalhealth.usc.edu/sharidworkin